

Sinclair
Broadcasting's
decision to force
their stations to
air an anti-Kerry
documentary days
before the election
is a clear example
of the glory of
freedom in America.

The Federal
government should in no way get involved.

Sinclair uses the
public airwaves free
of charge, and is
obligated by law to
serve the public interest. I am pleased that
Sinclair is planning
on serving that
public interest by
exposing the
negative aspects of
a potential
president of these
glorious United States. In doing so
voters may consider
certain issues that
might have gone
unnoticed in our
current climate of
liberally slanted
news and media
sources.

I trust that the FCC
will not put its
nose further into Sinclair's corporate
affairs than the law
will allow. The argument that Sinclair is not
serving public
interest is so vague
that in taking
action on this issue
the FCC will be
damned if they do or
damned if they
don't. The correct
course of action
will be to let
freedom play out.
Let the public have
as much information
as possible. I have faith that Americans
are smart enough to
reconcile the
content of the

programming in their own minds. This country does not
need yet another
instance of a loud
voice of a
disgruntled minority
to triumph over
freedom and the
opportunity for
choice.

Thank you
